Description: Figurine of a man, probably a groom, made of solid pottery, dark brown color. He wears a long gown, with V-neck. The hair, shown by black paint, hangs half way to the belt behind. His face, hands, and the stripes on his gown are painted red. Modeling is very simple; only the nose is depicted by a triangle. No feet. One hand is raised. There is a hole underneath, as in most of the group. Both arms are broken and repaired. Believed to date from 4th century B. C.
